Housing Project Hits Standstill

ALL WORK STOPPED BY STRIKE

A bricklayer's strike that halted work on the public housing project in west Cameron last September was no closer to settlement after a meeting of contractors and bricklayers in Waco this week.

The $ 576,... project was due to be completed in February. If work resumes soon, completion date would probably be delayed to early summer.

All masonry work stopped on the low-rent units after the contract between bricklayers Local No. 9 and Associated General Contractors of Waco, Inc., AGC, expired September 0. Bricklayers working on the Cameron project are on a "sympathy strike" since another General Construction Co., general contractor, on the masonry Cameron public housing units, subcontracts are members of Waco AGC.

Ted ..., manager of the Cameron Public Housing Authority, said he had enough eligible applications to fill all of the uncompleted units. Thirty-six of the new units are designed for the elderly and 14 are family size units.

Blueprints and planning and framework jobs had continued after the bricklayers walked out, but that work is now at a standstill.

Major obstacle in the bricklayer Union demands appears to be a wage increase that AGC said would amount to 17 or 18 percent in one year's time.

His Job Is Wolf Control

By Lloyd Albertson

The sign was a bright red and was tacked on a fence post beside the pasture gate. At the top "Danger!" was printed in large black type. Below this there was a warning that traps for wolves and coyotes were set in the area; everybody was cautioned to stay away and keep their dogs away.

Clifford Morgan, who is well known to Milam County farmers and ranchers for his work as a trapper, pointed to the poster as he got out of the pickup truck to open the gate and drive into the pasture.

"We always put them up so people will know there are traps set," he explained. "There's not much danger, except now and then to a dog — but we wouldn't want that to happen."

Morgan — his official title is District Field Assistant in the Division of Wildlife Service of U.S. Dept. Fisheries & Wildlife — had driven up to the big pasture in the Pond Creek area to check on some traps he had set out several days before after wolves had been reported seen there. This writer was along to find out how a trapper does his job.

Inside the pasture, Morgan drove the pickup towards the line of traps, and explained how the trap, called a "wolf getter," works.

It kills the wolf almost instantly by exploding a small cartridge containing cyanide, a deadly gas, when the animal pulls on the bait and releases a trigger. The trap, a metal device only a few inches in length, is buried in the ground except for about four inches of a rod that sticks up and is topped by a small knob. This knob is covered by a small piece of cloth to hold the bait, which is smeared on it. It has a disagreeable odor, but has been found to attract a wolf or coyote. When the wolf tugs on the bait and explodes the cartridge, the cyanide goes into his mouth and lungs, killing him.

"He may run fifty or seventy five yards," Morgan said, "but he really is dead almost instantly."

"After all," he added, "the purpose of trapping an animal is to destroy it — and this trap does that. Most other kinds of traps only catch and hold them, and then they have to be killed. So this trap would seem to be the most humane way to do it."

There is little or no danger from the trap to other animals, except occasionally to a dog. It requires rather hard pull — from two pounds — on the bait to trigger it. And the bait attracts wolves but not other animals.

A small ... with a caution

Clifford Morgan
THE TRAPPER

Clifford Morgan is a tall man with graying hair and a friendly smile. He is one of twelve trappers employed in the A&M district which includes Milam County. The district runs from Falls County south to Victoria and the coast, then east to the Louisiana state line. Texas is divided into seven districts; San Antonio is the headquarters for the state.

A trapper usually works in his own area, which may include a half dozen counties, but can be sent anywhere in the district. Farmers and ranchers who are suffering losses from wolves or other predatory animals can notify a trapper in person or through the district headquarters.

Morgan started work as a trapper with the Wildlife service in 1953.

"I like to work outdoors," he explained. "And I have hunted and done some trapping since I was a boy." An instructor from A&M originally helped him become familiar with the job when he went on a trip with him during several days.

Morgan and his wife live on a 150 acre farm near Rothbone where he runs some cattle and, as he explains, does just enough farming to raise some feed for them.

While he traps mostly wolves, he also traps other predatory animals, including bobcats and foxes.

THE WOLVES

Wolves have not been numerous in this area in recent years, he said, and in a good many cases they have bred with coyotes. This has produced a smaller animal, but one that can be destructive. They can kill baby calves, young lambs and small deer.

"Their mating season is in January and February," Morgan said. "The pups are born about nine weeks later. About two weeks before they are due, the pair starts to build a den. They usually start in an old armadillo hole or one on the side of a gully, and enlarge it into a tunnel six or eight feet long. At the end they dig out a small room for the female and the pups. The litter can be from five to a dozen -- usually six or seven."

The wolf brings in food for the first few days; then the female comes out for short periods and the pups come out later.

Wolves do not hunt in packs, Morgan said, in spite of the general belief that they do. "When people say they have seen a pack of wolves, what they really have seen was a family traveling together. The pups stay together until almost grown before they separate and drift away."

Wolves do hunt in pairs, however, he added, and are excellent hunters. They can outrun most animals, even jack rabbits, and know how to drive one into an ambush where a wolf lies hidden.

"They do not usually kill just to be killing something, only for food," he explained. "However, one pair of wolves working together can kill off a farmer's flock of sheep one at a time and before long put him out of business. That's why they have to be controlled."

He paused and added: "And that is what I want to make clear. Our trapping operation is to control wildlife -- never to eradicate it."

Now
With F.M.L.

Ah, rain on Friday, sunshine the day before, the weekend upon us with a final football fascination of Arkansas vs. Texas in a rousing rush to be the nation's No. 1.

President Nixon was a viewer when the Longhorns and the Razorbacks scattered beef and pork all over the Arkansas gridiron.

No one was predicting the outcome, since Arkansas had the No. 1 defense in the nation and Texas had the No. 1 offense. Likely the winner is Texas, Darrell Royal assuring the win with his percentage football and three deep talent.

NOW—NOW—NOW

The Herald will be introducing a unique printing service by January 1.

We'll be offering weekend service, the idea being most everything closes these days. And we may be able to serve some who want something out by Monday, with only time to bring in copy Friday.

It will amount to six-day service and in emergencies, one-day delivery. We can't do any better than that. And this service would be on short run, light production forms, envelopes, cards, etc.

You are invited to inquire.

NOW—NOW—NOW

The time of year most everyone enjoys, despite the rush of deadlines and Christmas gifting, is nearing.

Being a music fan, I enjoy the emphasis on music the Christmastime of year. If there is little joy in the world, and there is more than we sometime see, a great deal of enthusiasm develops this time of year.

Even when the gentle age arrives when Sata strikes out, when he is a man symbolizing only Santa, most of us want to believe the important things behind all that overstuffing and hair.

Some don't believe in much anyhow. But they never did. Their emotional erratum, and bitter experience blocked out the obvious beauties of nature, of people and things, when that word connotes crassness in the eyes of so many.

So many have had so many "things" they think that is all there is. Too bad, too bad, there is a lot more if they look, if we all look, for that matter.

City Rotarians Challenged . . .

Governor Urges Service

"If a dissident few can cause so much havoc, trouble and unrest . . think what good can be brought about with thousands of dedicated Rotarians in the United States working together. . . ."

So said Rotary Dist. Gov. Dave Smith, of Austin, before Cameron Rotarians Wednesday at the Texan's Western Room. He spoke during his annual visit to the Cameron civic club.

His introduction was by Guss Elley, president of Cameron Rotary Club, who also met with the governor and committee chairmen and directors of the Cameron club Tuesday night.

Smith challenged Rotarians to find patriousm a "now" thing, saying:

"There are those of us who are going to take more interest in our government, be more active in service and civic affairs. But when?"

Gov. Smith said "This is our time, our day, our generation. This is the life in which the work of this life is to be done . . . Today is as much a part of eternity as was any day a thousand years ago . . . or as will be any day a thousand years from now."

His address ranged over the prospects for the "scintillating, serving seventies," the enormous problems of modern life and the progress of automation, computerization in the modern world.

He anticipated the 1970's, both plus and minus. . . .

PLUS AND MINUS

"During the 1970's, the divorce rate may reach an all-time high. The number of children born out of wedlock may exceed 300,000 per year. Our courts may hear over 1 million juvenile delinquency cases each year. . . .and suicide may continue to be the second largest cause of teen-age deaths.

"There cannot be a better life for any, unless there is a better life for all."

"During the '70's", he continued, there will be an explosion of the number of young adults. Over half of the people, we are told, will be under 25 years of age.

"Prosperity will have been the general rule throughout the lives of these young people. Debt will be no barrier to them. They will have become accustomed to satisfying their wants now. . .and paying for them later.

"The '70's will also bring a change in the important 35-55 year old group. . .a fact which could have serious consequences for a number of industries," he said.

"It is this group . . .that will be able to afford a third or even fourth car. . . .that will buy the higher quality products of our land. . . .that will manage virtually all of the nation's business . . . and hold its public offices.

"During the 1970's over 20 million Americans will have reached the legendary retirement age of 65. No longer, however, will this group be content to just sit back and survive. They will want the good things of life, and they will be able to afford them . . . . ."

MORE OF EVERYTHING

Smith noted the increase of almost every goods and service for a rising population. And he noted the medical advances which will eliminate communicable disease, even curing the "common cold."

He emphasized the modern cost in mental and physical anguish. America ranks 15th among nations in the world in infant mortality, half of the nation's hospital beds are occupied by the mentally ill.

Yes, he said, "we have a long way to go if our aspirations for a healthier America are to be fulfilled in the '70's. And unless those aspirations are fulfilled, our material accomplishments, however great, will be of little consequence to many."

He noted the peaceful uses of atomic energy, eradicating farm pests, desalinization of water, producing better products from sheet steel to auto tires.

Smith traced the growth of myriad industries and ... in recent decades, and related the need for dealing with the problems that modern growth creates.

He saddened at "the thought of patriotism today" often evoking feelings of embarrassment."

And the Governor challenged Rotarians here to become involved, to provide leadership he already noted in Cameron Rotary and asked: "This is life. . . .and it is passing. So what are we waiting for?"

Christmas Catalog Makes Math Fun

What do you get when you cross a fifth grade class and Christmas mail order catalogs? Orders totaling way over $10,0.0 - that's what.

Ada Henderson School math teacher, Mrs. Beth Rangel, mixed fun with math when she gave one of her fifth grade classes mail order catalogs with instructions to fill out an order blank, total the prices, figure tax and postage.

Some of the totals were staggering. One youngster gave himself up completely to long-dreamed-of extravagance, ordering $1,515 in merchandise.

Several orders passed the thousand dollar mark, as the children ordered $700 pool tables and $340 mini-bikes with abandon, and added $100 drum sets and $200 rifles.

A few odd items turned up on the lists. Cake mix on one boy's order stood out among the strictly "boys stuff" he had listed. Some of the girls, apparently scorning the conventional feminine items, ordered mini-bikes, pool tables, and drum sets.

One girl thoughtfully included a $140 bar table for the house.

Nearly every household has a catalog lying around for weeks before Christmas, and many of the orders revealed what youngsters had decided they would choose if they could just forget about the cost or other parental restrictions put on Christmas wishes.

The unique math exercise probably helped the youngsters in another way: when you are in fifth grade, the class doesn't write letters to Santa Claus anymore, so perhaps filling out a mail order, even if it's not going to be mailed, helps make up for the loss of a tradition.

Baylor Presents Christmas Music At Library Friends

A special program of Christmas music will be presented by four Baylor University Students for Friends of the Cameron Public Library Tuesday evening.

The program will be at 7:30 p.m. in the Library.

Dr. Euell Porter, head of the Baylor Music School, said the students had prepared a varied program of traditional and modern arrangements of Christmas music.

Mrs. Jack Tumlinson, president of Library Friends, said "Baylor University has been particularly cooperative with program assistant since Friends of the Library started, and we are particularly looking forward to his program of music."

Mrs. Delbert Burlison is program chairman. Hostesses for the Christmas program will be the Cameron PTA and Pleasure and Profit Club.

Seminar Points Up Waste Problem

One of the problems discussed at the solid waste management seminar held at Belton last week was what to do about county waste disposal.

This is one problem Milam County needs to study, according to Henry Ivey, representing the Milam County Technical Action Panel.

The seminar was sponsored by Bell County Commissioners Court and the Central Texas Council of Governments. The Milam Couty TAP joined CTCOG as an associate member, and Ivey said the growing county waste disposal problem was one of the main reasons why TAP joined the organization.

County residents, lacking garbage and trash pickup, dump "everything" in ditches, gullies, and along county roads, Ivey said, and the mounds of waste are growing.

Residents of rural areas, small towns and communities have no officially designated dump grounds. Dead animals and all kinds of refuse are piled in gullies. "I don't think people realize how serious it is," Ivey said.

Some of the "dumps" are kept from spreading by county machinery pushing the trash into big piles. Cities with over 5,000 population are now required by law to use approved disposal methods, including the landfill method used in Cameron.

The Farmers Home Administration, under certain conditions, can make loans for solid waste disposal facilities, Ivey said. He is district supervisor for the county FHA office. The county office has been concentrating on rural water districts and sewer facilities with the limited funds that have been available, Ivey added.

State laws to strengthen local government for handling garbage and refuse were passed in the recent session of the 61st Legislature.

Two bills discussed at the seminar were SB 125 and HB 1367, County Refuse Disposal. In combination, the laws have the effect of expanding the authority and administrative flexibility of counties in solid waste disposal.

Counties are now authorized to license and regulate disposal sites outside of city limits. Counties are also authorized to operate solid waste facilities and to contract with other local governments for joint operation.

BROOM, MOP SALE MONDAY

Evening Lions Club members will take the sales route Monday with mops, brooms and other cleaning equipment.

The Lions will be answering a two fold service, helping the Caravan Sales for the Blind and building their local Special Project fund. Most of the products on sale are made by blind workers.

A sales task will sell the cleaning products all day Monday on the courthouse square. The door to door sales force will call in residential areas Monday evening.

The Evening Lions Club Special Projects Fund is used for community work such as the $50 pledge for St. Edward Hospital Building and the Crippled Children Camp.

Project To Restore Cemetery Started

An Old Pioneers Cemetery Association has been started by Ed West rook in an effort to restore the original Cameron Cemetery on US 77 just south of the Cameron city limits.

Westbrook said he hoped to start work on Monday, principally resetting the headstones and generally cleaning out the now unused cemetery. A fund to finance the restoration has been established and donations can be left at Citizens National Bank.

Headstones, still legible, date to pre-Civil War.

Rogers PTA To Have Christmas Program Tonight

The Rogers' Parent-Teacher Association will meet tonight (Monday) for the December meeting. A minimum of business matters will be brought up in order that the full time can be given to the Christmas program, according to Mrs. Edwin Psencik, president.

Louis Sieny, minister of the Rogers Church of Christ, will give the devotional talk and prayer. Mrs. Jane Langston and Mrs. Nancy Cabours' first grade rooms will sing.

A story, "The Real Meaning of Christmas," will be directed by Mrs. Janice Jackson and Mrs. Ernestine Powell of the faculty. Mrs. Lloyd Frits will assist with the program.

A chorus of students from the Rogers Elementary and Junior High Schools will present the skit and choral numbers, assisted by the adult choir of the First Baptist Church. The Choir of the Ocker Lethern Church will also present Christmas music, "Holy Night."

Rosebud, Lott Trustees Talk Consolidation

Negotiations are underway to consolidate the Rosebud and Lott schools, probably building new facilities in Travis.

Trustees from the two Falls County schools have met on three occasions in recent weeks to discuss the consolidation and site locations. No date has been set for a vote in the two districts, but it is expected to be in the near future.

In preliminary talks the two boards have discussed the Travis location which is about half way between the two towns on US 77 Some contacts have been made by trustees about available property near the now abandoned Travis School.

The consolidation would give the district an enrollment of about 1,000. Rosebud has approximately 700 enrolled in school and Lott has an enrollment of 330.

Students from Burlington, north Milam County, are now attending the Rosebud schools.

OUTDOORS IN TEXAS

By Vern Sanford

Motor care is important!

Many boaters, particularly fishermen, take their outboards from the water at the first real cold snap of fall and don't put them back again until the warming weather of early spring. For several months the motors are inactive. Usually they are put away with no thought at all as to maintenance.

Then the boaters wonder why the motors don't run as smoothly as they did when they were retired for the winter.

Undoubtedly the most common mistake is to store a gas tank containing fuel. During this inactive period the fuel goes bad. Sure, it will fire! But while stored the old mixture causes a varish-like substance to form inside the tank, and the old gas and oil will clog fuel pumps and carburetors.

Pour all the old fuel from your gas tank and slosh a little fresh gasoline around in the tank, to remove all oil deposits. Leave the tank open until all excess fuel evaporates.

With a little pre-storage care your motor will run as good as new come spring. This maintenance doesn't take long, but it might save you many dollars in unnecessary repairs.

Before you store your motor for the winter warm it up good while it is still on the boat and in the water. Remove the cowling. Put the motor in neutral and disconnect the fuel line. Then, while the engine is idling, inject storage seal (available at your outboard motor dealer) into the carburetor air intake. As the carburetor starts to run dry, apply an extra liberal dose. This method will effectively distribute the seal throughout the crankcase.

Now remove the motor from the transom. Be careful to keep it upright until all water has drained from the driveshaft housing. Flush the cooling system with fresh water according to manufacturer's instructions.

Make sure all water-drain holes in gear housing are open and clear. Also that the flushing plug is removed so that all water will drain out. This is very important! Trapped water may freeze and expand, thus cracking the gear housing and water pump housing.

Remove the spark plugs and inject a small quantity of storage seal into each spark plug hole. Re-install the plugs and operate the manual starter to distribute the storage seal. Then lubricate the swivel pin and all linkages as directed by your owner's guide.

Remove the air vent screw, grease filler plug and their accompanying washers. Insert lubricant recommended for your outboard's lower unit into the grease filler hole. Inject new grease until the old grease starts to flow out of the air vent hole. This indicates the housing is filled. Next, replace the vent screw, filler screw and washers.

Spray the entire powerhead with a coating of corrosion preventative to protect the finish of all parts beneath the cowl. Exterior of the motor also can be sprayed to protect the finish.

Remove the propeller and clean the shaft with steel wool; then apply graphite grease or silicon crease and re-install the propeller.

If you plan to leave the motor on your boat or store the entire rig on a parked trailer, disconnect the battery terminals. Clean the battery. Be sure to remove all corrosion around terminal posts. Apply exterior corrosion and rust preventative. Check electrolyte and add distilled water as necessary to bring to recommended level.

It also helps to charge the battery until the specific gravity of the electrolyte reaches 1.260. Every 30 days recheck the electrolyte and take the specific battery reading. Apply a booster charge when hydrometer reading drops below 1.150. This may save your battery from one season to the next.

It is best to store the battery where it is subject to temperature change.

Keep your motor in a clean dry location. It should be covered, but be sure there is enough air circulation to prevent moisture build-up.

HD Agent's Notes

By Christine Laws

A number of fall fabrics, woven with heavy yarns ravel easily. The sewing machine can help prevent raveling in several ways.

Some machines have special patterns for overcasting or edging. Try a blind hemming pattern to let the stitch overcast seam edges.

For this, reverse the usual procedure for holding fabric under the machine. Put the edge to be finished to the left of the needle and pressure foot instead of to the right side. Stitch one fourth inch from the edge of seam.

Adjust the machine for easy tension so the edge of the fabric is not curled from too tight tension.

For a straight stitching machine, shorten stitch to 15 stitches an inch and sew a fourth inch from the seam edge. To slow the raveling process hand overcast or pink the seam. Whatever the finish, remember that seams should be flexible and not bulky.

MINIATURE DRUMSTICKS

A chafing dish full of miniature hot drumsticks begins a meal with fun and economy. Cut three pounds of broiler-fryer chicken wings in half; use meatier" drumstick" half for frying.

Blend together a half cup flour, a half cup grated Parmesan cheese, a teaspoon salt, a teaspoon paprika, an eighth teaspoon pepper and a half teaspoon dried leaf oregano.

Dip chicken pieces in three-fourths cup buttermilk and roll in dry ingredients. Fry in oil or shortening; drain. Keep warm in chafing dish. This recipe makes 18 hors d'oeuvre servings.

Wolfgang Mozart played several musical instruments well and composed a number of short pieces of music by the time he had reached the age of five.

Tips From Tippit

The act of driving a car calls for control, not just of the car itself but of our emotions, physical reactions and thought processes.

It also calls for respect: respect of rules and laws, respect for the other driver, for traffic conditions and weather conditions.

There is a broad field of individual responsiblity involved as well. The driver of a car is responsible for himself, his car, the other driver and the other driver's car.

If this sounds like a lot of things for one driver to worry about, consider the traffic situation a moment before deciding to ignore them.

The highway is probably one place where everyone is aiming for the same goal—to proceed without incident (or accident) to a predetermined destination.

We have drivers of all backgrounds, skills, training, beliefs and ages in cars that vary from a $10 jalopy to a $30,000 imported luxury car. Cars in varying states of repair, some dangerous to operate and others in top mechanical condition.

Leopold Is Named Potlining Foreman

Robert J. Leopold has been named Potlining Forman at Alcoa's Rockdale Works, it was announced by Homer Bower, production manager. His promotion became effective November 16.

Leopold completed a foreman training course conducted at Rockdale Works during October. The course, coordinated by Training Supervisor Tom Doggett, comprised an in-depth classroom review of forman's responsibilities coupled with on-the-job training.

The new foreman went to work for Alcoa in 1956 and has worked in the Potlining Department most of the time since he was employed. He was a leadman before his promotion.

Mobil To Build Plant In Temple

Mobil Chemical Company announced Wednesday that it will build a multi-million dollar plant to manufacture plastic packaging films in Temple.

Executive vice president, Ray C. Adam, who will assume the presidency of Mobil Chemical on Jan. 1, said construction is scheduled to begin in January and production by September. The plant is Mobil Chemical's first plastics facility in the Southwest.

"Our Temple plant will supply a variety of polyethylene garment, produce and waste bags, including our 'Hefty' line, to markets in seven states," Adam said.

Initially, the plant is expected to employ some 150 people and to produce 17 million pounds of films per year. Adam said a substantial increase in films production and the addition of facilities for producing foam plastics "is a very real possibility for the future."

The word "monk" first meant one who lived alone, but in the course of time it came to mean a member of a religious community.

Mental Health

What Is Mental Illness?

In simplest terms, mental illness is a group of diseases which affect the mind.

There are many kinds and classifications used; and some authorities number mental disorders in many hundreds. But they can be classified under four major, general headings.

These four kinds are: psychoses, neuroses, personality or character disorders, and psychosomatic diseases.

Psychoses are usually characterized by strange feelings and behavior and a distortion of reality. They were what used to be meant by the old term "insanity," happily now professionally—and to a large extent publicly—discarded.

The neuroses are less severe emotional disturbances, although thinking and judgment may be impaired in some cases. Neurotics may be continually bothered by feelings of anxiety or depression.

Neuroses take many forms, and ly for only a brief period. may have an up-and-down pattern, requiring treatment or even hospitalization at times, though usually for only a brief period.

Personality disorders are difficulties in adjustment that show themselves in the kind of disturbed behavior that is seen in the drug addict, the chronic alcoholic, or the delinquent.

Irresponsibility and immaturity are often indications of this kind of disorder; and the sick person behaves as if he does not care about the standards of conduct or achievement that are important to most people in our society.

Psychosomatic diseases are ailments in which the signs and symptoms are primarily physical, although there may be a large emotional involvement.

Included among these illnesses are asthma, peptic ulcer, colitis, high blood pressure, and certain kinds of arthritis. The afflicted may need psychological treatment, but he is also in real need of medical treatment.

In summary, mental illnesses usually have many causes. They may be caused by organic malfunctioning, by severe or prolonged stress or strain, or by a combination of both. But nearly all can be helped and alleviated by today's treatments, such as psychotherapy, rehabilitation, drugs, or combinations of these.

By Stanley F. Yolles, MD, Director, National Institute of Mental Health.

'NECKNAME'
The term "leatherneck" comes from the black leather stocks that marines once wore to protect their throats against sabers.

Ancient Egyptians practiced the art of mummyfying their dead for 3,000 years or more, believing that they would someday return to the body and occupy it again.

Artist-teacher James Brock advises Joan Bean on shading.

Gary Cobb, Ronnie Thweatt and Ronald Cobb put final touches on a horse, a kneeling woman and a hunting dog.

Ready for final rubbing and polishing are scultings of Karla Wiggins and Ann Wells.

Cindy Clark and Patricia Burnett share a palette as Joan Bean and Tamarah Claypool work on sketches in the "Painters Corner" at the Brock Studio.

Bobby Brock, Leslie Luecke and Elizabeth Walston form leg muscles on horses they are sculpting in afternoon classes at the James Brock Art Gallery and Studio on the Old Waco Highway north of Cameron.

Former Stable Is Classroom

Dust flies along the gravel road leading to the James A. Brock Studio as students come and go from weekend, afternoon and evening classes. They meet in the converted stable where the western artist works.

The classes are a new avenue for Brock. Some inquiries from potential students prompted him to try a small class last summer. The 'small class' never materialized. Enrollment for the first session was so large that three classes had to be scheduled, two for school age students and one for adults.

The classes continued in a fall session and grew out of the space originally set up for them. Now sculpting students work with wax and wire in a front room and potential painters design with oil paints and canvas in a long back room, the original room of the studio. Another room will be added, hopefully before the next session in January.

Sculpting and painting enthusiasts vary in age from elementary school age to senior citizen. Classes last two hours with 12 meetings in a session.

Artist Brock teaches his sculpting students to study the forms around them. Many who modeled a dog this fall, learned for the first time the actual bone structure of their favorite pet.

Surrounded by their teacher's work, students are inspired to work a little harder to perfect features and proportion. Brock watches and advises, moving from the oil painters to sculptors, usually with a wood carving in his hand, one of a family he is completing.

Brock says he realizes some may never sculpt or paint again, but they will all have a better understanding and appreciation of the artist's work. "Most of my painting students will continue to work at home," Brock said. "But if they gain nothing else, I'll be satisfied if they have learned to really see the colors and forms of the world they live in."

Students Mary Lee Green and Anne Marie Marek cover armatures with petroleum wax.

Mike Rains watches his cousin Sandra Broadus work on a western scene she is completing in oils.

Tractor Safety Stressed

"Tractors can and do turn over", Ben Bullard, assistant safety director of the Texas Farm Bureau pointed out to Buckholts vo-ag classes Thursday.

During the program Bullard pointed out a variety of safety rules in which all tractor and machinery operators are guilty of violating at one time or another. Every tractor operator should take a break at mid-morning and again at mid-afternoon in addition to a regular lunch hour.

Tractor overturns and rearward upsets were stressed as the factors most often causing fatal accidents in the field or pasture. Here is also the greatest point of false security because a tractor can tip over in 3-10 of a second while it takes the average mind ⅝ to of a second to think and react to the situation by jumping.

Hitching a tractor to a piece of equipment is also dangerous. In this situation the person helping is in the most danger. If he holds the tongue of a trailer up to meet the drawbar and misses, he can be crushed between the tractor and trailer. To prevent such an accident the operator should back his vehicle into place, kill the engine, then proceed to secure the intended load to the draft vehicle, whether a tractor or pickup truck.

Allowing extra persons, especially children, to ride on a tractor is particularly dangerous. A tractor is engineerrd for only one person, the operator.

Children are run over by tractors each year because the operator, generally their dad, did not see them in time, Bullard said. Keep children away from the working area.

Refueling was a point highly stressed as dangerous. Too many operators get in a hurry to refill and spill gasoline onto a hot engine. Many tractors costing $8,000 to $10,000 have been ruined in this manner.

For protection from overturns, the use of a Roll-gard or crush-proof cab was suggested by Bullard. By securing the operator with a seat belt and use of Roll-gard or crush-proof cab,m any lives could have been saved.

"Never use a seat belt without a Roll-gard or protective cab!", Bullard added.

Proper lighting when on roadways was suggested as a must. In addition to the regular lighting required, the SMV emblem is now mandatory in the state of Texas was well as 17 other states.

The Texas Farm Bureau Safety Department hopes to bring these facts to 10,000 or more farm people, or those interested in farming, each year.

Only A Begnining . . .

Statistics can be turned this way or that, observers say, but statististics cited by "Texas Almanac" of '70-'71 tell of whopping gains for Milam industry and agriculture.

One might think industry would gain only at agriculture's loss. But the figures belie that estimate.

For instance, while industry payroll increased about $4.3 millions from '68-'69 to the present, agriculture gained $1.6 millions, mostly in livestock.

This balance proved out while industrial employment went from 2831 to 3.187, more than 125 of these jobs at Alcoa. Another 125 will be employed when Alcoa's eighth potline is activated.

The balance of the increase was in Cameron industry: Magna-Craft, Hensley-Russell, Inc., Royal Seating Corp.

Most interesting is Milam County's listing as a tourist attraction with historic sites, Indian battlegrounds, mission ruines, not to mention the obvious hunting and fishing advantages afforded by Milam's many rivers and streams.

Completion of the new St. Edward Hospital will add to the employment picture here, joining Newton Memorial Hospital in a community need for doctors. Staff will necessarily grow with these major medical advances. The hospitals are likewise listed in the "Almanac".

We may search memories before World War I to find a healthier economic picture for Cameron and Milam County. And it is only a beginning.

What Others Say . . .
One Way To Chaos . . .

Dr. Kinsley Smith, just retired as a psychology professor at Pennsylvania State university, was talking about young people. He finds them interesting but is a bit distressed at the idea of some that they can change things drastically without education enough to do the job properly.

"If the kid wants to change the establishment, that's one thing," he said. "But let him be like Ralph Nader, who led the fight for safer autos, clean meat, consumer protection. He went after the establishment, but he got a law degree first so he'd know what he was doing." It is a valid point. If one wants to tear something down or change it drastically, he ought to know how to improve things. If he doesn', the result could be nothing but chaos.—Milwaukee Journal.

LETTERS....

Dec. 4, 1969

Dear Editor:

I have just finished looking at the latest issue of Life magazine and its pictures of MY LAI. My soul is in anguish.

Given time, I could document the fact that the first casualty incurred in the seige of Atlanta, Georgia, my home town, in 1864, was a child, a little blonde girl. She was standing beside a lamp post when the first Yankee shell burst in the street beside her. The only comment General Sherman had to make as he began his infamous March to the Sea, was "War is hell."

Isn't it so? Since reconciliation to God is the beginning of the heaven-experience, the very opposite of reconciliation must be the feeling of the hell-xperience. And th extreme opposite of reconciliation is killing. I am sure that men who have seen combat have felt that they had had a preview of hell. And I am wondering if men who have been in combat know something about our treatment of prisoners and civilians that we don't know, back here at homefront.

To be sure, My Lai's messacre is still only alledged. It is not yet proven by a military court. No crime is proved until due process of law declares it so. No man is a murderer until he has had a fair trial which stablishes his guilt beyond a shadow of a doubt. It is not my business to play judge.

It is my business, as a servant of Christ, to plead with Americans never to commit the sort of crimes we thought only Japs and Nazis were capable of. It is my business as a servant of Christ, to remind the Christian that when it comes down to a choice between being obedient for obedience's sake or being obedient to Christ, and his ways, the Christian has only one choice to make.

I am reminded of Hue. There thousands of South Vietnamese were slaughtered simply for being government sympathizers. If it is proved by a court of law that it was murder at My Lai, then it would have been for the same reason - only there they were VC sympathizers. I ask you, where is the difference in the two? I deplore Hue, as much as My Lai. It sickens me. This sort of stuff must stop. If it does not, we and our children may find ourselves being herded into a group by inleading Chinese Communists soldiers to be shot down, and our 13 year-old daughters made sport of, because we were U.S. Government sympathizers. Would that be right? No. Neither is Hue or My Lai. Some people point to Hue and ask "Why make such a big thing out of My Lai?" "Look at their atrocities." My answer is that if we have stooped so low as to use their tactics, then we are as low as they are. And if we are as bad as our enemies, then we have lost the ideals we were fighting for anyway, and there is no point in going on.

War is hell. Granted. But this is despicable. How much depravity can a man willfully engage in on the feeble pretense or excuse that since war is hell anyway, he might as well be the devil's bestb Sometimes a man will say, "I had no choice." That sounds like Nuremburg. "Orders are orders" is not the rationale a Christian goes by. We must purge ourselves of this kind of sin. If we do not, we may someday have to stand another country's version of the Nuremburg trial. God help us if we do.

One thing I feel with all my heart is that if it is proved that murder was committed at My Lai, then nothing that happened at My Lai expresses anything that America stands for. If murder was committed at My Lai, then there is no place for what happened at My Lai in the American ideals I was taught. If the alledged crime at My Lai is true, then America, and her spirit, and all she stands for, were not served by those involved, but betrayed.

Sincerely Yours,
W. Wirt Skinner

Wholesale Prices Continue To Rise

WASHINGTON

Wholesale prices increased 0.4 percent in November, according to preliminary estimates by the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The advance brought the preliminary Wholesale Price Index to 114.3 (1957-59=100), 4.5 percent above a year earlier. Industrial commodities rose 0.2 percent over the month and farm products 2.3 percent while processed foods and feeds averaged unchanged.

Metals and metal products were an important factor in the rise for industrials as prices were hoisted for nonferrous metals and a variety of fabricated metal products. Machinery and equipment prices continued to move up.

Fresh and dried fruits and vegetables jumped in price much more than seasonally. Egg quotations climbed sharply. However, cattle and hogs both declined.

Pepper quotations dropped significantly after a spectacular run-up last month and meat and animal feeds prices were somewhat lower, but those for processed poultry, fish and coffee rose.

IRS Questions--

Q - Can I take a business deduction for the bottles of whiskey I buy as Christmas gifts for my customers?

A - Yes, business gifts are a deductible expense as long as they do not exceed $25, to any one customer during the year. If gifts total more than $25, only $25 my be deducted. A gift to a customer's wife or child must generally be included with any gift to the customer himself in figuring the $25 limit.

Note that gifts which cost $4 or less are not subject to this limit if your name is clearly and permanently printed on the item and is one of a number of identical items distributed by you. This would cover calendars, pens and similar items.

County Railroads Pay $34,961 Tax

Current annual taxes paid to the various government agencies by Texas railroads in Milam County totaled $34,961, according to the Texas Railroad Association.

That amount was the county's share of the nearly $11 million the railroads paid in Texas on their own right of way and other property.

The biggest railroad contribution was to the school systems throughout the state. Large sums were also distributed to city, village and county governments and for road and bridge funds.

In addition, of course, was the large total in taxes the more than 30,000 railroad employees in Texas contributed on their own property. The vast majority of rail workers, many of whom live in Milam County, own their own homes.
